Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine whether there were differences in the prevalence of self-reported depression between men and women who had been exposed to violence by intimate partners. Data from the National Longitudinal Study of Women's Health are used. Results indicate that among those who have ever been married, 6% of men and 8% of women reported having experienced depression during their lifetime. Among those who had been exposed to violence by an intimate partner, 10% of men and 17% of women reported having experienced depression during their lifetime. These results suggest that exposure to violence by an intimate partner may increase the risk of depression.
